Another pandemic-inspired reread was William S. Burroughs ' s Cities of the Red Night, which I hadn ' t picked up since high school and read this time for the novelty of the viral plague. Hindsight says that my giddy anticipation at rereading this “ prescient ” book was unnecessary, but it seemed like a good enough excuse to read Burroughs.

~~The Millions: Cities of the Red Night by William Burroughs~~

Perhaps Burroughs' finest novel after Naked Lunch, Cities of the Red Night intercuts a detective novel plot with scenes in the ill-fated pirate colony of Captain Mission on Madagascar with acerbic wit and visionary imagery. The proof bears on its cover and title page a darkly ironic subtitle, "A Boy's Book", not present in the published book.

"Cities of the Red Night" is perpetually climaxing. Whereas, for other authors, it might prove a diverting or comical (unwritten) pastime to imagine what it might be like if all of their characters--from every time and space--were to meet over drinks, Burroughs can't seem to resist transporting his entire cast into hallucinatory, ritualistic ...

The Cities of the Red Night were six in number: Tamaghis, Ba ' dan, Yass-Waddah, Waghdas, Naufana, and Ghadis. These cities were located in an area roughly corresponding to the Gobi Desert, a hundred thousand years ago. At that time the desert was dotted with large oases and traversed by a river which emptied into the Caspian Sea.
