How They Shape the ...

Mother Nature presents a radical new way of understanding how mothers act and why, and how this new understanding is changing the way scientists think about how evolution works. Drawing on anthropology, history, literature, developmental psychology, and animal behaviour, Sarah Hrdy examines the distinct biological and genetic elements that constitute maternal instinct.

Maternal instinct appears to be nature's way of trying to ensure that the mother takes responsibility for her new baby and helping her to accept the new demands placed upon her. There are two aspects to maternal instinct:-The mother's bond of loving and caring for the child. The mother's acceptance of responsibility for the child.

She discusses the evolutionary benefits of maternal instincts and why they would have risen. The obvious benefits she discusses are that it is a better success rate for children if the mother cares for and nurtures the child. It talks about particular instincts like fear of strangers and attachment to a child - presenting the idea that these
